Auditorium Announcement Extraordinary.

The week of June 20th at the Auditorium contains many items that should appeal to those in search of amusement. The management has had should appeal to those in search of amusement. The management has had a four-foot airshaft cut through the center of the ceiling, clear through to the roof, and with the big suction fan working, the air and temperature of the theater is several degrees cooler than the street. Three acts comprise the vaudeville end of the show for next week, with the pictures coming in strong as a feature. Benwick & Hart head the vaudeville list, with their delightful comedy of college life entitled the "Thunderstorm," the scene being laid in a pugilistic training quarters. Clara Rogers, the dainty cellist, will present a musical offering on this mellow-toned instrument, something that will appeal to all. Knowing how well Rube acts are liked here, the management have secured Crosby and Lee, who will appear in the rural skit, "Down Home." Keeping right up to the minute the Auditorium has secured at considerable expense the only authorized pictures of Jack Johnson in training for the big fight of July 4th. These pictures were taken in California two weeks ago by John-Johnson in training for the big fight of July 4th. These pictures were taken in California two weeks ago by Johnson's order, so the public could see for themselves his condition for the coming battle. The trust has made a wask attempt to keep up with the pace by truing to foist on the public a picture of an ex-pugilist in a series of poses, but the Johnson reel is the goods Remember the date, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, June 22, 23 and 24. Watch for Jeffries next.

BREED THEATER.

"Yele-Harvard Boat Races," Feature Picture.

One of the most interesting and fa-One of the most interesting and familiar feature pictures of the season is on at the Breed theater today for the last time, and is a delightful romance of the Thames, entitled Auntie at the Races.

The stroke oar of the Harvard crew has a sweetheart who is very anxious to attend the races at New London, but cannot do so without a chaperone, so the chivalrous athlete secures one so the chivalrous athlete secures one of his chums to play the part of chaperone, and hastily securing a disguise, proceeds at once to the home of the pretty gir, and presents to the father his chum, whom he introduces as his aunt. The giddy father is at once im-pressed with the "aunt," and allows pressed with the "aunt," and and the the daughter to go. Arriving at New London, the girl overhears a plot to London, the girl overhears a plot to waylay her lover and prevent the Har-vard crew winning, and hastily sum-mons an officer, who forces the party into an auto with him, and succeeds in releasing the young fellow just in time to permit his reaching the boat house at Gales Ferry in time to take his place in the shell, and row the his place in the shell, and row the winning boat. All through the picture are familiar scenes of New London, its hotels, big bridge, holiday crowd and the unexcelled ylew of the race and finish.

A powerful hunting picture entitled The Egret Hunter, proves an interesting one, and Mr. Loud makes a hit with Nobody Knows Where John Brewn Went.

Girl Who Gets Under the Fence. A certain young woman who is much given to country delights is especially fond of walking. Now walking through a lovely hone with sunbeams sifting through breeze swayed leaflets is a deight to anybody, even the most conventional soul, but walking through the really true.

the most conventional soul, but walking through the really truly country, encountering everything from wire fences to buils, is quite another story. But even the fences have no terrors for this young woman; she has been "out" several years. How does she manage it? Why she first sizes the fence up. Fences are of but two sorts, generally speaking, rail and wire, and they may be negotiated in just three ways. If there be a convenient opening this expert naturally crawls through. A close set rail fence is usually but a walkover.

"And now how will you take this one?" asked the writer as the expert came to a wire fence with the wires closely stretched, the lowest one seeming to be about eight inches from the ground.

ing to be about eight inches from the ground.

"Easy," laughed the slender expert, tossing herself at full length beside the fence. Then she grasped the lowest wire, raised it as much as she could and at the same moment deftly rolled under,—Philadelphia Record.
